Character Grows at this Farm

Newberry Boys Farm is a place young men go when they need healing and a place to grow in character. I have seen this personally over the years, as our church in Bowman has supported this mission for years.

The sprawling 340-acre Boys Farm in Newberry County just outside of the city limits is a family environment for boys that need a stable family life. Since its inception in 1960, more than 400 boys from fourteen different countries have called this non-denominational Christian working farm home. Many of the boys are orphaned or have faced abuse at home.

Boys Farm Development Director is Jonathan Mauger. He said the farm currently has twenty resident boys ranging in age from a 5-year-old in kindergarten to a 22-year-old junior at Lander University.

And they are a farm. They own a small herd of cattle, goats, and 30 chickens. Everyday the boys at the farm work with the animals and grow crops to eat.

Pee Dee REC hosts boll weevil meeting

The SC Boll Weevil Eradication Foundation will hold its annual cotton growers meeting at 10:00 a.m. on December 11, 2007, at Clemson University's Pee Dee Research and Education Center in Florence.

Growers will hear updates from the Farm Service Agency, the Clemson University Extension Service, the SC Boll Weevil Eradication Foundation, the Southeast Boll Weevil Eradication Program and Clemson University Regulatory and Public Service Programs.

"This is the grower's opportunity for input and to have questions answered regarding the boll weevil eradication program that is so important to South Carolina cotton growers," said David Howle, Assistant Director, Clemson University Regulatory Services.

For more information, contact David Howle at 864-646-2120 or by e-mail at dhowle@clemson.edu.

South Carolina Peach Grower named to Fruit & Vegetable Industry Advisory Committee

Larry Yonce of J.W. Yonce and Sons in Johnston, SC has been named to the new Fruit and Vegetable Industry Advisory Committee. USDA will schedule the committee's first meeting for January 2008 in the Washington, DC area.

The 25 members were selected from individuals nominated by their peers. Committee members represent fresh fruit and vegetable growers/shippers, fresh fruit and vegetable wholesalers, retailers, industry trade associations, importers, fruit and vegetable processors, foodservice suppliers, fresh-cut processors, brokers and state departments of agriculture. Each member is appointed to a two-year term. Fourteen of the members are incumbents from the previous advisory committee.

Character

Grade school boys raise chickens, while the middle school-aged boys work with goats, and the high school-aged boys have the primary responsibility to show cattle.

"We refer to it as animal therapy," Mauger said. "When most of the boys get here they are devastated emotionally. And when they get involved with the animals, it's amazing." I believe they learned this therapy technique from my father, who figured, as long as my brothers and I were working, we couldn't get in trouble.

Mauger said for a lot of our boys this is the first time they've been around animals, and, he added, the animals do not care what their background is. "It's amazing to watch their face light up the first time a goat licks their hand," he said.

Each boy who lives at the farm attends public school in Newberry County. The boys are involved in sports at school, and two play varsity football at Newberry High School. Mauger said one of the boys has accepted a football scholarship to the University of South Carolina. The boys are also involved in 4-H. This year one of the Boys Farm residents won the Reserve Championship in the goat category at the State Fair, and another won Junior Reserve Champion for showing a Charolais cow at this year's State Fair.

There are also three sets of house parents that live and work on the farm. Each of the husband and wife house parents, except one, have their own children that live in the home and work on the farm. Mauger said there are three houses, one for elementary, middle and high school age boys.

Today, Boys Farm is growing. Mauger said they recently fulfilled a dream by building a wooden corral to work cattle. And there are more plans for the future. Mauger said of the 340 acres, most of it is wooded, and they are looking at clearing some of the land to create more pasture land to handle more cattle. The goal is to have 40 cows and calves and begin an equine program with six to eight horses.

"We believe passionately about what we do," Mauger said.

They had a good foundation to be passionate about their mission. I can remember Mr. and Mrs. Shealy bringing the whole crew from Boys Farms once a year to our church for many, many years. I would wager there are a number of men in South Carolina who would attest that their character did indeed get nurtured and fertilized and grown at Boys Farm in Newberry, SC.

The Pickens County Cattlemen's Association and the Clemson Extension Service have partnered to host the South Carolina Farm & Ranch EXPO. The EXPO will be held at the T. Ed Garrison Arena in Clemson, SC, on November 30, December 1 and 2, 2007.

The three-day event will feature seminars of interest not only to beef producers, but also to horse enthusiasts. Dr. Harold Hupp, Clemson Extension Livestock Specialist, will organize the seminars.
